The UK is mostly a destination country human trafficking. The government and organisations are increasingly using the term 'Modern Slavery' which includes Human Trafficking as well as exploitation in general. Labour exploitation relating specifically to Eastern European and Vietnamese male adults, and sexual exploitation of Albanian, Romanian and Nigerian female adults. My work specifically is to coordinate a multi-agency partnership across two counties, Hampshire and the Isle of Wight, whose total population is around 2 million people. We work closely with the Police service and encourage working together with all agencies including the local authorities, health services, NGOs, law enforcement, etc. There are many benefits to working together and since we started coordinating the Modern Slavery Partnership the amount of intelligence logs on Modern Slavery have increased significantly.
